MEDICAL. BETHESDA. This unparalleled specific secompounies in nature's laboratory, and from its magic power and unprecedented schierements the most eminent men in this nation have, after a thorough and severe test, pronounced it the only Soversign Hemedy for Bright's Disease and Haberies; also all Urinary, Eladder and Liver Affections; also Dropsy, &c., &c. To the minds of many our calama may seem preposederous to accomplish with Betnesda Water that which has so long and still continues to baffe medical science. We saw but a test. Do not allow your skepticism to be your peril, if BETHERSA don't cure you, it cannot certainly do you any injury. Therefore wast your seriol if the most pleasant and efficient curative agent ever offered to suffering homanity. The Water is for sale at ChARLES SFOTT & CO. of the Seven Sleepers has been told in pious song and story. Who were these Seven Sleepers? Is it only a monkish legend, an invention of the "dark exest" Or is the story true, or how it at least a historical benis? It was in the year of our Lord 250 that Decise, the most fahuman of all the Roman Emperors in his persecution of the Christians, in making a tour through his Provinces as rived at Ephesus, in Asia Minor. Christianity had already obtained a foothold here, although the great majority of the people still adhered to the heathen religion. Upon his arrival the Emperor ordered a sacrificial festival to be held in honor of Jupiter, Apollo and Diana; In this festival every one was commanded to take part, under penalty of incurring the Imperial displeasure in case of refusal. Among the Christians of the city were seven youths, descendants of noble families; The names of six of them were Maximilian, Malchus, Dionysius, Joaques, Scrapio aud Conysius. These determined to die rather than to obey the mandate. As soon as Decima heard of their determination he commanded them to be brought before him. "Go," said he, "and procure beense that you may offer to the highest powers." "The Highest Power," they replied, "has His throne in the heavens, and is the living and Almighty God, who hath ereated heaven and earth. Him we worship, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and we can never again bow down to dumb idols that are With terrible glauce the Emperor measures the youthful confessors. Then suddenly changine youthful confessors. Then suddenly changing his manner, he endeavors to win them by his promises and his arguments. For he know the terrible consequences if they should still continue their stubborn resistance.

With a calm courage the young men departed from the presence of the Emperor. By the citizens of Ephesus they were proscribed; by many, however, secretly admired. Deter-mined not to renounce their faint they, how-ever, desided to avoid the monster as much as possible. With this object they be elves to a range of mountains in the neigh-corhood of Ephesus. There they discovered a cave, the entrance to which was concealed with thick forlage. In this cave they hid them-selves, and one of their number, Malchus, the one least known in this city, was appointed to supply them with food.

The day of the Emperor's return arrived. One of the first questions was concerning "the stubborn youths." "They have escaped," was the reply. But their concealment had been discovered. Spies had followed them, and purchased the Emperor's favor by revealing the place of concealment. Decius, knowing well that he could not hope to change the purpose of the wanths, care command to close. pose of the youths, gave command to close the mouth of the cave with a wall, and thus close them in a living tomb. No sooner said than done.

There was one man, however, who, though still a heathen, had heard the Gospel, and was not far from the Kingdom of God. Destring that further generations might know whose bones rested there, he took a roll of whose bones rested there, he took a roll of parchment, and, writing on it the names of the youths and an account of their courageous bearing, inclosed it in an iron casket, and, unobserved by the workmen, slipped it into the cave and then quietly withdrew.

Many a scotling "good-night" was called after them by the brutal populace that evening in the streets of Ephesus. Many a tender "good-night" did the Christians send after them in their prayers. And he who preserved them in their prayers. And he who preserved David in the cave of Adulham, and rescued Daniel from the den of lious, heard their prayer. The light of day had for them faded away. But they remembered, "He giveth His beloved steep:" They lay themselves down and stept. Soft is their siumber and no dan-zer is nigh. It is as though holy angels had encamped round about them. We will leave them to their sleep, and write over them on the dark rocks the words of David: "How ex-cellent is thy loving kindness, O God! There-fore the artitlem." ore the children of men put their trust unde the shadow of thy wings.

Time passes on swift wings. Generations come and go like phantom spirits. About 187 years later we are again in Ephesus. But changed is the scene! Decius, the tyrant, is moldering in his grave. The world is com-pletely changed.

A wealthy land-owner desires to make some improvements in his estate. In searching for suitable building material he finds an old wall with large square stones. The blocks are which interest and the mouth of a cave is revealed. It is the cave of the Seven Sleepers, whose history had long since passed into oblivion. The rays of light entering for the first. time after so many years awakened the youths. They thanked God that deliverance had come so seen. For they supposed but a single night had passed since they were immured. Malchus was again sent to the city for bread

But the way seemed very strange to him; and what was his astonishment to find over the very gates of the city a glittering cross. In the city itself he can scarcely trust his senses. The images of the gods were removed. In the place of the gods were removed. In the place of the heathen temple he notices buildings with proud domes and glittering crosses, and in the forum he hears the wit-messes swear by the omnipotent God, yes, even, by the name of Christ, Instead of Diana and by the name of Christ, Instead of Diana and Apollo. He thinks it is a dream. Accosting a man on the street, he asks him the name of the city. "The name of the city is Ephesus," was the reply. "Can it be that this is Ephesus, where but a few days ago we were proscribed by the imperial edict?" was the thought of Malchus. But, mindful of his errand, he entered a baker's shop, and offers in payment for breach of the control of for bread a silver coin. The baker took the coin and carefully examined it. "This is a coin and carefully examined it. "This is a very ancient coin." said he. "Why, it bears the image of Declus. Where did you obtain it?" "Where is Declus!" was the reply of Malchus. "Has he left the city, and if so, when!" The baker and the crowd that had gathered in the meantime looked at Malchus, and seemed to regard him as one who had lost his reason. One of them demanded to know where he had discovered the hidden treasure. Finally Malchus was taken before the bishop of the city.

The bishop was a reverend and dignified man.

Malchus who he In a kind manner he asked Malchus who he was and whence he came. Malchus replied that he was one of the seven vonths who had recently been immured in the grotto at the command of the Emperor Decius, but that the Lord their God had again given them light and "The Emperor Decius ! It is nearly two hundred years since Declus sat upon the throne. Many emperors have reigned since then. Theodosius now reigns by the grace of God. Hea-thendom has long since fallen. The cross is everywhere victorious. But tell me, where are your six companions? Show us the cave."

Thus spoke the bishop. And Malchus led him to the cave, followed by an immense concourse of Christians. In the cave they found the iron casket with the parchment roll, conthe iron casket with the parenment roll, con-taining a full necount of their history. For two centuries the youths had slept, and now they awake to see a regenerated world. The bishop hastened to send an account of the matter to Theodosius at Constantinople. The emperor himself hastened to Ephesus to beliefd the wonder. But the youths, obedien-to an inverview in the same hour that Malto an inner voice, in the same bour that Mal chus returned had again laid down, and the Lord took their souls to heaven.

FEJEE MANNERS. The men wear a turban and a sash; the adies wear a belt with a fringe from three to ten inches deep, not unlike the fringed jet belts that have just come into favor with our own ladies. The highly fashionable ladies dye their hair two colors, and arrange it so as to present a diameter of about five feet. They ent their prisoners, and even sometimes their neighbors, and have a particular relish for fat young women roasted whole, a dish thus pro-pared being called in Feejee parlance 'long pig.' They do not hesitate to kill bables and strangle widows when they are on the parish; and it is common to surgest to old parents and it is common to suggest to old parents that their room is more agreeable than their company, and if they do not take themselves out of the way the fiftal hand is frequently applied to the parental throat.
